THREE BEQUESTS FOR THE COLLEGE

Discover Additional Legacy from Estate Settled Twenty Years ago. Two other Small Bequests. Other News at College.

Three small legacies will be turned into the funds of Gettysburg College within a short time.

In the early '90s the estate of Miss Caroline S. Campbell, of York, was, by bequest, divided between Gettysburg College and the American Bible Society. Miss Campbell was the heir of an uncle who died in 1834. It now appears that he was the owner of property not known of at the time of her death but which has since been discovered. This has been disposed of, the college receiving $145.03 as its share.

Gettysburg College will in a few days receive the $500 legacy from the Charles W. Slagle estate of Baltimore.

Dr. C. K. Keller, deceased, of Harrisburg, remembered the endowment fund of the college by a legacy of $200.

The college tennis team lost to Mercersburg at that place on Saturday by three matches to two.

Gettysburg will again be in the eastern division of the Pennsylvania Inter-Collegiate Basketball League next season, the members of the division remaining the same as last year.

The college army is dwindling gradually, lack of sufficient excitement from the source of war being given as the reason.

INTERESTING CASE

Tax Assessment of Mt. Holly Springs Property Agreed Upon.

The Mount Holly Paper Company went into bankruptcy in August 1912. The triennial assessment for the year 1913 was made during the fall of 1912, and the property of the Paper Company was then assessed at $82,500.00 which was a slight increase over the former assessment.

The real estate of the company was sold under foreclosure proceedings of the mortgage in November 1912 to the committee of bondholders for the sum of $25,000, and, about one year later was again sold by the committee at a public sale to Kitzmiller Brothers for the sum of $31,000.00. While the property was owned by the committee an appeal was taken to the Cumberland County Commissioners for the reduction of the assessment on the ground that the fair market value of the property was the price for which it was sold at public sale. The Commissioners declined to entertain the appeal and thereupon an appeal was taken from the decision of the Commissioners to the Court. A hearing was had recently and the case came up for argument Tuesday when the Court was informed that a settlement had been effected upon a basis of valuation of $55,000.00.

ELECTED OFFICERS

GUST RETURNS READY TO FIGHT

Sixteen Months in the Service of his Native Land Makes Former Candy Kitchen Man Ready to Fight for Uncle Sam.

Gust Varelas returned to Gettysburg Wednesday night after serving more than a year in the Greek army in the recent war of the Balkan States against Turkey. He was greeted by his fellow countrymen here most warmly and has been given a very cordial welcome by the people of Gettysburg generally. No sooner had Gust arrived in New York last week than he enrolled with the 25,000 other Greeks who offered their services to President Wilson in case of a call for volunteers in the Mexican difficulty. In talking of this offer this morning Gust said,

"If they want us to go to Mexico we will all be ready and we will go down there, not to see the country or to have a good time, but to fight and we know something about that kind of thing. During the time I was in this last war my comrades were shot down all around me but I was lucky and escaped without a wound. We know what it is to face the bullets and we can put no less than 25,000 trained men at Uncle Sam's disposal in a very short time."

Gust fought in a number of the more important engagements in the war for which he was called home in January 1913, and he takes no little pride in the gallant fight put up by Greece and its allies. He says that he saw many Americans during his stay at home but only one from Gettysburg, Dr. H. C. Alleman, whom he greeted in Athens last summer.

Mr. Varelas would scarcely be recognized as the same young man who left here sixteen months ago. He has gotten considerably heavier, wears a large black mustache and shows the effects of his exposure to the elements. The boat which brought him back to New York had a thousand other Greeks, who responded to the call in the early part of last year, and who have come back to take up their vocations which they followed before leaving at that time.

Gust says that he has not yet made up his mind whether he will stay in Gettysburg or whether he will engage in business elsewhere. He was formerly proprietor of the Gettysburg Candy Kitchen now owned by J. H. Kadel.

GYPSIES AGAIN

Gettysburg Officer Goes to Rescue of County Residents.

Chief of Police Emmons answered a call for help from York Springs on Wednesday evening and, with special deputies, John Hartman and David Cluck, went in William Eden's automobile to G. P. Emmert's farm and placed under arrest four of the tribe of gypsies which passed through Gettysburg on Wednesday afternoon, some of whom were taken before Squire Harnish here. The arrest at York Springs was made at the point of a gun. Squire Pearson released the gypsies upon their payment of costs amounting to $39 and their promise to leave the county. The arrest was made on a warrant issued by Squire Harnish, of Gettysburg.

COMPANY ELECTION

A Chi-Namel Demonstration

That is Different.

YOU can ask the Demonstrator to show you any Chi-Namel product you may be interested in, actually applied.

For instance—White Enamel, Porch Furniture Enamel, Gold and Aluminum Paint, Floor Wax, Furniture Polish, Colored Varnishes for staining and varnishing with one application.

She will not merely show you the package containing these materials, but show it in the brush, and applied before your eyes—in fact, you can take the brush and apply it yourself.

You can see the actual colors—see how easy it is to apply—how all brush marks disappear before it hardens.

This will be a demonstration worth while for any one who is responsible for the care and good appearance of the interior woodwork and furniture of a home.

By asking for a demonstration of any particular Chi-Namel product you will not place yourself under any obligation to buy; this demonstration is to acquaint the public with the use and economy of the home.

REBEL VICTORIES HALT PEACE PLAN

Are Rapidly Advancing on Mexico City.

HUERTA IS IN DANGER

The Mediators Announce They Will Proceed Without Regard to Course of Carranza.

Washington, May 7.—While the Mexican situation was outwardly calm, pending the formal opening of the conference of South American mediators at Niagara Falls on May 18, there continued an active undercurrent of discussion and preparation for the peace plans, and at the same time definite reports reached the Constitutionalist headquarters in Washington of sweeping victories of their forces near San Luis Potosi and other points far south of Saltillo, where it was thought their next big battle would occur.

The news of Constitutionalist successes reached Washington in dispatches from General Carranza to Raphael Zubaran, minister of the interior in the Constitutionalist cabinet, who had a direct wire set up to the headquarters of General Carranza in Chihuahua.

General Carranza's message showed that three converging campaigns were in active operation, each within 300 miles of Mexico City. General Obregon, with 15,000 men, operating from the Pacific coast side, had captured all the intervening territory, was besieging Mazatlan and was threatening Mexico City from the west.

Another division, General Carranza reported, had fought a battle at Panzacos, near San Luis Potosi, which is 300 miles north of Mexico City. This is the southernmost point which the Constitutionalist have reached in central Mexico, and with the army now attacking Tampico, they declare that the general advance on the Mexican capital is to be made within a few weeks from three sides.

The significance of these Constitutionalist successes lay in the fact that San Luis Potosi is far south of Saltillo, and only 300 miles from Tampico on the west and Mexico City on the south.

General Carranza's report of the desperate condition of the Federalists at Mazatlan was coincident with reports from Admiral Howard, who stated that a land and sea engagement was carried on there, the Constitutionalist firing rifles and field guns from Piedra Island, while the Federal gunboat Morelos was supported by the Federal shore batteries.

The South American mediators completed their plans for beginning the conference at Niagara Falls. Headquarters will be established at a leading hotel there, which consented to advance the date of its opening in order to accommodate the conference. The mediators, with their secretaries, stenographers, etc., will make a party of about fifteen. They will leave Washington on the 14th to prepare for the opening conference on the following Monday. The Huerta delegates are expected to arrive by way of Montreal, coming thence to Niagara Falls.

The mediators definitely announced that they would proceed with their work without regard to the course of Carranza, in coming in or remaining out of the conference. They have made no further overtures to him, and if he comes in it will be voluntary on his part.

The United States delegates have not yet been named. Secretary Bryan said, however, that there was no truth in published insinuations that the United States might not appoint delegates and thus withhold participation in the conference. He will talk further with President Wilson before the names are announced.

CONGRESS TO END JULY 10

Senator Kern Makes Statement After Conference With Wilson.

Washington, May 7.—Probable adjournment of congress by July 10 was predicted by Senator Kern, Democratic leader of the senate, after a White House conference, at which the president and Senators Kern, Hoke Smith and O'Gorman discussed the legislative program.

Senator Kern said he believed the Panama canal tolls repeal bill would be disposed of within two weeks, and that the administration anti-trust program would be completed before adjournment. He said he was hopeful the rural credits bill would be reached.

Father and Daughter May Die.

CHARLES BECKER.

On Trial Second Time For the Murder of Herman Rosenthal.

© 1914, by American Press Association.

BECKER OPENS FIGHT ATTACKING WHITMAN

Defense's First Move Was to Ask Change of Venue.

New York, May 7.—Charles Becker, once a Lieutenant in the New York police department, was placed on trial for the second time for the murder of Herman Rosenthal, the gambler, in July, 1912.

Notwithstanding that the crime was committed nearly two years ago, public interest in the case appeared hardly less acute than at the first trial, when Becker and the four gunmen were found guilty. The latter died in the electric chair; Becker was granted a new trial by the court of errors and appeals.

As soon as the trial opened it was evident that Becker had planned to fight for every inch of ground that offered a vantage point. At the outset of the proceedings the defense attacked what it characterizes as District Attorney Whitman's practice of "talking to the newspapers" to the detriment of their client's case. For this reason they asked that the district attorney be adjudged in contempt and for a change of venue.

The change of venue was denied and the selection of the jury was begun. Later the contempt motion was also denied, the district attorney fighting both moves.

The selection of the jury proceeded with fair speed during the day, and the prospect was that the box might be filled sooner than was expected.

HAITI MEETS BRITISH DEMAND

Indemnity of $62,000 Is Granted to English Subject.

Port Au Prince, Haiti, May 7.—The Haitian congress authorized the government to treat with the British diplomatic representative in the matter of the demand submitted for the payment of $62,000 to a British subject, named Peters, and to open a credit for the payment of that amount. The national bank at once advanced the $62,000 to the government.

The representative earlier in the day delivered an ultimatum to the Haytian government, demanding immediate payment in compensation for the destruction by fire of Peters' saw mill during the Leconte revolution.

The British demand is supported by the presence of the British cruiser Suffolk. The payment of this sum of money had been previously ordered by a court of arbitration.

Rebels Wreck Gunboat.

Los Angeles, Cal., May 7.—Reports received here say that Mexican Federalists and Constitutionalist fought a battle at Mazatlan on Tuesday. The rebels are said to have put a Federal gunboat out of commission and she had to be beached. Americans are said to have been taken on board a steam ship in the harbor for protection.

FUNSTON MOVES FORCES FORWARD

Extends Lines Mile Farther West of Vera Cruz.

THROWS UP EARTHWORKS

Lands Big Guns From Fleet and Is Fully Prepared to Repel Attack by Mexicans.

Washington, May 7.—Brigadier General Funston, in supreme command on land, has begun to extend the American lines at Vera Cruz and to throw up heavy fortifications.

General Funston has received a free hand to do virtually whatever he may consider necessary to insure the safety of the American position from attack and to meet any attack by the Mexican forces reported to be massing at Soledad and Jalapa under Generals Maas and Navarret.

It is known that a definite course of action has been mapped out should it become necessary to make an aggressive move.

Major General Leonard Wood will be in supreme command, with General Funston in charge of the advance beyond Vera Cruz. General Charles J. Bailey, of the coast artillery, will be in command of the Vera Cruz base, according to these plans.

That the Mexicans concentrating about twenty miles west of Vera Cruz have trained artillery upon the Vera Cruz pumping station at El Tejar and are guarding railroad tracks leading to Mexico City, evidently in expectation of a forward march by the American soldiers, was indicated in a message from General Funston to the war department.

General Funston reported that, under the authority given him by Secretary of War Garrison, he had advanced his outposts about a mile beyond the pumping station, had thrown up breastworks of sand bags and taken other precautionary measures.

"Funston has discretionary powers to protect his position, and will take every precaution to ensure the safety of the American forces at Vera Cruz," said Secretary Garrison.

In view of the serious situation that has developed through the concentration of troops under General Maas, army officials believe that Secretary Garrison will take steps within a few days heavily to re-enforce the American troops now at Vera Cruz. Another infantry brigade, in all probability, will leave Galveston Friday or Saturday.

General Funston lacks mountain artillery because of the inability to transport mules from Galveston, and these will be sent to him within a few days and used in connection with the detachments now on picket duty outside of Vera Cruz.

Land Field Artillery From Warships.

Vera Cruz, May 7.—Every preparation is being made by Brigadier General Funston, commander-in-chief of the American forces here, to guard against a surprise attack by the Mexican Federalists, who are reported to be massing at Soledad and Jalapa under Generals Gustavo Maas and Rubio Navarrete, or to advance the American lines.

The possibility of an attack is considered remote, but the American forces are in readiness if it comes.

Three batteries of heavy field artillery of five guns each have been landed from the United States warships. It is pointed out that an artillery attack directed from Jalapa to destroy the water works at El Tejar is the most favorable plan open to the Mexicans, and General Funston is preparing to repel any such attempt.

In addition to the field guns landed from the war vessels twenty-four pieces of marine artillery have been placed in position for defense.

The latest information received confirms early reports of the destruction of the San Francisco bridge and also of one smaller bridge nearer to Vera Cruz. The abutments were dynamited and the structure let into the water. One of the bridges was destroyed by Mexican irregulars.

So far as is known the Soledad bridge is still unharmed, but has been mined and can be destroyed at the first sign of an American advance.

French Aviator Killed.

Rabat, Morocco, May 7.—Lieutenant Saint Lague was killed and Ronne-raw, a pioneer, received slight injuries when the French army aeroplane in which they were flying capsized and fell from a height of 1200 feet. The aviators were returning from a long scouting expedition over country occupied by hostile Moors, and on reaching the town of La Laitte prepared to make a landing.

Warships to Leave Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, May 7.—Five warships will leave the League Island navy yard today and tomorrow. Two, the gunboat Sacramento and the repair ship Palmer, will go to join Admiral Badger's fleet at Vera Cruz. The other three are ordered to Annapolis.

Aged Man Gives Life For Dog.

Warwick, R. I., May 7.—Albert Howe, formerly a contractor and builder, of Boston, gave up his life to save his bulldog, Mr. Howe, who was seventy-seven years old, tossed the animal to safety from the path of an auto.

DAER LEAVES ENTIRE ESTATE TO FAMILY

Will Filed Makes No Public Bequests.

Reading, Pa., May 7.—The estate of George F. Baer, former president of the Philadelphia & Reading railway, is left, with the exception of a few minor bequests, to his widow, his five daughters and his grandchildren, according to the will which was filed here.

There were no public bequests of any kind, as had been expected by many persons who knew Mr. Baer well.

Mrs. Baer received $400,000 and the personal property of her husband, including carriages, motor cars and the use of "Hawthorne," the Baer summer residence in Reading. Each grandchild received $10,000.

The five daughters of Mr. Baer receive the remainder of the estate in equal portions. These daughters are: Mrs. William Griscom Cox, of Wilmington, Del.; Mrs. William N. Appel, of Lancaster, and Mrs. Heber L. Smith, Mrs. Isaac Heister and Mrs. Emily Connard, of Reading.

Each of the household employees receives $50 a year for each year over five in which they have served the Baer family.

Mrs. Baer, Isaac Heister and William N. Appel, sons-in-law, were named executors.

The absence of public bequests is accounted for by friends by the fact that Mr. Baer had been most generous in his life. He gave $50,000 to Franklin and Marshall college, Lancaster, his alma mater, a few years ago; $100,000 to the Reading Y. M. C. A.; $10,000 to the Reading hospital and $5000 to the Reading armory site.

The estate has been estimated variously from $5,000,000 to $15,000,000. One of his chief assets is the plant of the Reading Paper mills, worth about $500,000; the Baer building, a skyscraper, and a $30,000 farm.

Ancient Cult of the Flycatcher.

Beelzebub was the fly god of Ekron (referred to in II Kings 1:2, 3, 4 and 10). The great god Baal was sometimes worshipped as the "lord of the fly," as he who drives off the flies. The flies were then and are now man's worst enemies in Palestine and Egypt. We remember well how we had to be continually fighting them off with fans when we were traveling in those lands. The flies settled on the eyes of the children and literally sucked out their eyesight.—Christian Herald.

Keep Faith With Yourself.

Success in life means keeping one's faith with oneself and with one's friends. It means being content to travel along the path of righteousness in spite of the fact that worldly good and ease do not lie along that path. Most of all it means "to be honest, to be kind, to earn a little and to spend a little less," and to take joy in the world and to spread happiness and joy to all near you.

Its Final Disposition.

"Has Dobbs disposed of his motor car?" "Yes." "I was not aware that he had disposed of it." "Oh, yes. He disposed of it one morning between the hours of three and four o'clock, in a deep gully about ten miles east of town."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Manufacturers' OUTLET SALE

AT THE
CUT PRICE OUTFITTERS
No. 9 Chambersburg Street
GETTYSBURG, PENNA.

ONE DOLLAR
will do the work
of Two Dollars
at the Cut Price
Outfitters.

Owing to the war scare and depression of business in the large manufacturing cities the manufacturers have been crowded to the walls with surplus stock, and are willing to dispose of same, regardless of cost or value, to secure cash to meet their pressing financial obligations. As our buyer was in the city and took advantage of the prices which high grade merchandise could be bought for at spot cash prices, we secured a tremendous stock, as low as from 40 to 50 per cent. of the original wholesale price. So you will note that we are in a position to give the people of Gettysburg and Adams County the benefit of these prices, which will add another leaf to our already known cut price store. All goods will be sold in 10 days at from 45 to 55 cents on the dollar, wholesale price, as we bought this stock with that intention. Nothing held in reserve—a chance of a life-time to save money, as ONE DOLLAR will do the work of Two Dollars. Come in and see, seeing is believing. Have made ample arrangements to handle the crowds.

CHAPTER I.

The Crash.
"Failed!" ejaculated John Vallant blankly, and the hat he held dropped to the claret-colored rug like a huge white splotch of sudden fright. "The Corporation—failed!"

The young man was the glass of fashion, from the silken ribbon on the spotless Panama to his pearl-gray gaiters, and well favored—a lithe stalwart figure, with wide-set hazel eyes and strong brown hair waving back from a candid forehead.

Never had his innocuous and butterfly existence known a surprise more startling. He had swung into the room with all the nonchalant habits, the ingrained certitude of the man born with achievement ready-made in his hands. And a single curt statement—like the ruthless blades of a pair of shears—had snipped across the one splendid scarlet thread in the woof that constituted life as he knew it. He had knotted his lavender scarf that morning a vice-president of the Vallant Corporation—one of the greatest and most successful of modern-day organizations; he sat now in the fading afternoon trying to realize that the huge fabric, without warning, had toppled to his fall.

How solid and changeless it had always seemed—that great business fabric woven by the father he could so dimly remember! His own invested fortune had been derived from the great corporation the elder Vallant had founded and controlled until his death. With almost unprecedented earnings, it had stood as a very Gibraltar of finance, a type and sign of brilliant organization. Now, on the heels of a trust's dissolution which would be a nine-days' wonder, the vast structure had crumbled up like a card-board. The rains had descended and the floods had come, and it had fallen!

The man at the desk had wheeled in his revolving chair and was looking at the trim athletic back blotting the daylight, with a smile that was little short of a covert sneer. He was one of the local managers of the corporation whose ruin was to be that day's sensation, a colorless man who had acquired middle age with his first long trousers and had been dedicated to the commercial treadmill before he had bought a safety-razor. He despised all leeches along the primrose paths, and John Vallant was but a decorative figurehead.

Vallant started as the other spoke at his elbow. He had come to the window and was looking down at the pavement. "How quickly some news spreads!"

For the first time the young man noted that the street below was filling with a desultory crowd. He distinguished a knot of Italian laborers talking with excited gesticulations—a smudged plasterer, tools in hand—clerks, some hatless and with thin alpaca coats—all peering at the voiceless front of the great building, and all, he imagined, with a thriving fear in their faces. As he watched, a woman, coarsely dressed, ran across the street, her handkerchief pressed to her eyes.

"The notice has gone up on the door," said the manager. "I sent word to the police. Crowds are ugly sometimes."

Vallant drew a sudden sharp breath. The corporation down in the mire, with crowds at its doors ready to clamor for money entrusted to it, the aggregate savings of widow and orphan, the piteous hoarded sums earned by labor over which plucked sickly faces had burned the midnight oil!

The older man had turned back to the desk to draw a narrow typewritten slip of paper from a pigeonhole. "Here," he said, "is a list of the bonds of the subsidiary companies recorded in your name. These are all, of course, engulfed in the larger failure. You have, however, your private fortune. If you take my advice, by the way," he added significantly, "you'll make sure of keeping that."

"What do you mean?" John Vallant asked him quickly.

The other laughed shortly. "A word to the wise," he quoted. "It's very good living abroad. There's a boat leaving tomorrow."

A dull red sprang into the younger face. "You mean—"

"Look at that crowd down there—you can hear them now. There'll be a legislative investigation, of course. And the devil'll get the hindmost!" He struck the desk-top with his hand. "Have you ever seen the bills for this furniture? Do you know what that rug under your feet cost? Twelve thousand—it's an old Persian. What do you suppose the papers will do to that? Do you think such things will seem amusing to that rabble down there?" His hand swept toward the window. "It's been going on for too many years, I tell you! And now some one'll pay the piper. The lightning won't strike me—I'm not tall enough. You're a vice-president."

"Do you imagine that I knew these things—that I have been a party to what you seem to believe has been a deliberate wrecking?" Vallant towered over him, his breath coming fast, his hands clenched hard.

"You?" The manager laughed again —an unpleasant laugh that scraped the other's quivering nerves like hot sandpaper. "Oh, lord no! How should you? You've been too busy playing polo and winning bridge prizes. How many board meetings have you attended this year? Your vote is prodded as regular as clockwork. But you're supposed to know. The people down there in the street won't ask questions about patent-leather pumps and ponies; they'll want to hear about such things as rotten irrigation loans in the Stony-River Valley—to market an alkali desert that is the personal property of the president of this corporation."

Vallant turned a blank white face. "Sedgwick?"

"Yes. You know his principle: 'It's all right to be honest, if you're not too damn honest.' He owns the Stony-River Valley bag and baggage. It was a big gamble and he lost."

Vallant was staring at the other with a strange look. Emotions to which in all his self-indulgent life he had been a stranger were running through his mind, and out of his eyes came a pair of shears—had snipped across the one splendid scarlet thread in the woof that constituted life as he knew it. He had knotted his lavender scarf that morning a vice-president of the Vallant Corporation—one of the greatest and most successful of modern-day organizations; he sat now in the fading afternoon trying to realize that the huge fabric, without warning, had toppled to his fall.

He turned and without a word opened the door. The older man took a step toward him—he had a sense of dangerous electric forces in the air—but the door closed sharply in his face. He smiled grimly. "Not crooked," he said to himself; "merely callow. A well-meaning, maneuvered young fop wholly surrounded by men who knew what they wanted!" He shrugged his shoulders and went back to his chair.

Vallant plunged down in the elevator to the street. He pushed past the guarded door, and threading the crowd, made toward the curb, where his bulldog, with a bark of delight, leaped upon the seat of a burnished car, rumbling and vibrating with pent-up power. There were those in the sullen anxious crowd who knew whose was that throbbing metal miracle, the chauffeur spick and span from shining capvisor to polished brown puttees, and recognized the white face that went past, pelted it with muttered sneers. But he scarcely saw or heard them, as he stepped into the seat, took the wheel from the chauffeur's hand and threw on the gear.

He drove mechanically past a hundred familiar things and places, but he saw nothing, till the massive marble fronts of the upper park side ceased their mad dance as the car halted before a tall iron-grilled doorway with wide glistening steps, between windows strangely shuttered and dark.

He sprang out and touched the bell. The heavy oak parted slowly; the confidential secretary of the man he had come to face stood in the gloomy doorway.

"I want to see Mr. Sedgwick."

"You can't see him, Mr. Vallant."

"But I will!" Sharp passion leaped into the young voice. "He must speak to me."

The man in the doorway shook his head. "He won't speak to anybody any more," he said. "Mr. Sedgwick shot himself two hours ago."

CHAPTER II.

Vanity Vallant.

"The witness is excused."

In the ripple that stirred across the court room at the examiner's abrupt conclusion, John Vallant, who had withstood that pitiless hail of questions, rose, bowed to him and slowly crossed the cleared space to his counsel. The chairman looked severely over his eyeglasses, with his gavel lifted, and a statuesque girl, in the rear of the room, laid her delicately gloved hand on a companion's and smiled slowly without withdrawing her gaze, and with the faintest tint of color in her face.

Katharine Fargo neither smiled nor flushed readily. Her smile was an index of her whole personality, languid, symmetrical, exquisitely perfect. The little group with whom she sat looked somewhat out of place in that mixed assemblage. Smartly groomed and palpably members of a set to whom John Vallant was a familiar, they had had only friendly nods and smiles for the young man at whom so many there had gazed with jaundiced eyes.

To the general public which read its daily newspaper perhaps none of the gilded set was better known than "Vanity Vallant." The new Panhard he drove was the smartest car on the avenue, and the collar on the white bulldog that pranced or dozed on its leather seat sported a diamond buckle. To the spacemen of the social columns, he had been a perennial inspiration, and the splendors of his latest bachelors' dinner at Sherry's—with such items the public had been kept sufficiently familiar. To it, he stood a perfect symbol of the elder ease and insolent display of inherited wealth. And the great majority of those who had found place in that roomy chamber to listen to the ugly tale of squandered millions, looked to him with a resentment that was sharpened by his apparent nonchalance.

Long before the closing session it had been clear that, as far as indictments were concerned, the investigation would be barren of result. Of individual criminality, flight and suicide had been confession, but more sweeping charges could not be brought home. The gilded fool had not brought himself into the embarrassing purview of the law.

The jostling crowd flocked out into the square, among them a fresh-faced girl on the arm of a gray-bearded man in black frock coat and picturesque broad-brimmed felt hat. She turned her eyes to his.

"So that," she said, "is John Vallant! I'd almost rather have missed Niagara Falls. I must write Shirley Dandridge about it. I'm so sorry I lost that picture of him that I cut out of the paper."

"I reckon he's not such a bad lot," said her uncle. He hailed a cab. "Grand Central Station," he directed, with a glance at his watch, "and be quick about it. We've just time to make our train."

Some hours later, in an inner office of a downtown skyscraper, the newly-appointed receiver of the Vallant Corporation, a heavy, thick-set man with narrow eyes, sat beside a table on which lay a small black satchel with a padlock on its handle, whose contents—several bundles of crisp papers—he had been turning over in his heavy hands with a look of incredulous amazement. A sheet containing a mass of figures and memoranda lay among them.

The shock was still on his face when a knock came at the door, and a man entered. The newcomer was gray-haired, slightly stooped and lean-jawed, with a humorous expression on his lips. He glanced in surprise at the littered table.

"Fargo," said the man at the desk, "do you notice anything queer about me?"

His friend grinned. "No, Buck," he said judiciously, "unless it's that necktie. It would stop a Dutch clock."

"Hang the haberdashery! Read this—from young Vallant." He passed over a letter.

Fargo read. He looked up. "Securities aggregating three millions!" he said in a hushed voice. "Why, unless I've been misinformed, that represents practically all his private fortune."

The other nodded. "Turned over to the corporation with his resignation as a vice-president, and without a blessed string tied to 'em! What do you think of that?"

"Think! It's the most absurdly idiotic thing I ever met. Two weeks ago, before the investigation—" but now, when it's perfectly certain they can bring nothing home to him—"

He paused. "Of course I suppose it'll save the corporation, eh? But it may be ten years before its securities pay dividends. And this is real money. Where the devil does he come in meanwhile?"

The receiver pursed his lips. "I knew his father," he said. "He had the same crazy quixotic streak."

He gathered the scattered documents and locked them carefully with the satchel in a safe. "Spectacular young ass!" he said explosively.

"I should say so!" agreed Fargo. "Do you know I used to be afraid my Katharine had a leaning toward him. But thank God, she's a sensible girl!"

Dusk had fallen that evening when John Vallant's Panhard turned into a cross-street and circled into the yawning mouth of his garage.

"It's Very Good Living Abroad. There's a Boat Leaving Tomorrow."

A little later, the bulldog at his heels, he ascended the steps of his club, where he lodged—he had disposed of his bachelor apartments a fortnight ago. The cavernous seats of the lounge were all occupied, but he did not pause as he strode through the hall. He took the little pile of letters the boy handed him at the desk and went slowly up the stairway.

He wandered into the deserted library and sat down, tossing the letters on the magazine-littered table. He had suddenly remembered that it was his twenty-fifth birthday.

In the reaction from the long strain he felt physically spent. He thought of what he had done that afternoon with a sense of satisfaction. A reversal of public judgment, in his own case, had not entered his head. He knew his world—its comfortable faculty of forgetting, and the multitude of sins that wealth may cover. To preserve at whatever personal cost the one noble monument his father's genius had reared, and to right the wrong that would cast its gloomy shadow on his name—that had been his only thought. What he had done would have been done no matter what the outcome of the investigation. But now, he told himself, no one could say the act had been wrung from him. That, he fancied, would have been his father's way.

He smiled—a slow smile of reminiscence—for there had come to him at that moment the dearest of all those memories—a play of his childhood.

He saw himself seated on a low stool, watching a funny old clock with a moon-face, whose smiling lips curved up like military mustaches, and wishing the lazy long hands would hurry. He saw himself stealing down a long corridor to the door of a big room strewn with books and papers, that through some baleful and mysterious spell could not be made to open at all hours. When the hands pointed right, however, there was the "Open Sesame"—his own secret knock, two fierce twin raps, with one little lone some one afterward—and this was unfailing. Safe inside, he saw himself standing on a big, polar-bear-skin, the door tight-locked against all comers, an expectant baby figure with his little hand clasped in his father's. The white rug was the magic entrance to the Never-Never Country, known only to those two.

He could hear his own shrill treble: "Wishing-House, Wishing-House, where are you?"

Then the deeper voice (quite unrecognizable as his father's) answering: "Here I am, Master; here I am!"

And instantly the room vanished and they were in the Never-Never Land, and before them reared the biggest house in the world, with a row of white pillars across its front a mile high.

John Vallant felt an odd beating of the heart and a tightening of the throat, for he saw a scene that never faded from his memory. It was the one hushed and horrible night, when dread things had been happening that he could not understand, when a big man with gold eye-glasses, who smelled of some curious sickish-sweet perfume, came and took him by the hand and led him into a room where his father lay in bed, very gray and quiet.

The white hand on the coverlet had beckoned to him and he had gone close up to the bed, standing very straight, his heart beating fast and hard.

"John!" the word had been almost a whisper, very tense and anxious, very distinct. "John, you're a little boy, and father is going away."

"To—Wishing-House?"

The gray lips had smiled then, ever so little, and sadly. "No, John."

"Take me with you, father! Take me with you!"

His voice had trembled then, and he had had to gulp hard.

"Listen, John, for what I am saying is very important. You don't know what I mean now, but some time you will." The whisper had grown strained and frayed, but it was still distinct. "I can't go to the Never-Never Land. But you may sometime. If you—" if you do, and if you find Wishing-House, remember that the men who lived in it—"

before you and me—" were gentlemen. Whatever else they were, they were always that. Be—" like them, John.—" will you?"

"Yes, father."

The old gentleman with the eyeglasses had come forward then, hastily.

"Good-night, father—"

He had wanted to kiss him, but a strange cool hush had settled on the room and his father seemed all at once to have fallen asleep. And he had gone out, so carefully, on tiptoe, wondering, and suddenly afraid.

To Clean Stove.

When cleaning a stove that has been splashed with fat from the frying pans the best plan is to take a piece of rag and dip it into the soft soot at the back of the stove, rubbing the greasy parts before applying the blacking. This improves the appearance of the stove, and you can polish it without difficulty.

Hour of Death.

When the hour of trouble comes to the mind or the body, or when the hour of death comes, that comes to high and low, then it is not what we have done for ourselves, but what we have done for others, that we think on most pleasantly.—Sir Walter Scott.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

SPRING GREENS.

THERE are many wild plants that may be used for food in the spring. Tradition ascribes medicinal qualities to some of them. Lamb's quarters, dock, wild mustard, plantain, wild cress, sorrel, dandelion, etc., are among these food plants.

Lamb's Quarters.—Select the tender leaves of lamb's quarters, mustard, horseradish and plantain. Put in a pot and cover with water, adding a slice of bacon. Cook for three or four hours, then drain off the water. Serve with hot vinegar well seasoned.

A Novel Soup.

Sorrel Soup.—Put into a saucepan a pint of sorrel leaves, three sprigs of parsley, three or four lettuce leaves and an onion, all cut fine. Add a cupful of water and simmer ten minutes. Mix in two tablespoonfuls of flour stirred smooth with a little cold water, and when blended pour in, gradually stirring all the time, two quarts of boiling water. Have ready three eggs, hard boiled. Separate whites from yolks, cutting the whites in small pieces and rubbing the yolks to a cream with a little milk. Add to the contents of the saucepan a cupful of milk and a cupful of mashed potatoes stirred together. Season with salt, pepper and nutmeg. Put the prepared egg whites and creamed yolks into a hot soup tureen, add a cupful of croutons, pour over them the hot soup, stir and serve.

A Delicious Salad.

Macedoine of Vegetables.—Take any cold vegetables, sprigs of cauliflower, strips of carrot and turnip, peas and beans and mustard and cress. Divide the cauliflower into sprigs, cut the carrot into strips and the turnips into dice. Mix the vegetables together and mask with a little salad dressing. Garnish very highly with a little mustard and cress.

Sorrel and Dandelion.—Wash and shred dandelion and sorrel leaves, but keep separate, as the dandelions require longer cooking. After they have stood in cold water for an hour put the dandelions in a saucepan of boiling water. Stew until nearly tender, add the sorrel and simmer until the liquid disappears and the leaves are all tender. Chop or beat with a wooden spoon and season with salt, pepper, butter and nutmeg if desired. Serve with a garnish of hard boiled eggs, the whites cut in rings and the yolks rubbed through a ricer.

THE RULING HABIT.

He Would Travel That One Old Road, Danger or No Danger.

Cyril Maude, the English actor-manager, who was in this country recently, in making a talk before a dramatists' society in New York told a story to illustrate the inborn conservatism of his countrymen—especially those resident in rural parts.

He said that through the fields between two villages in Sussex ran a footpath. It was not the quickest route in going from one of the hamlets to the other, for it wandered about, but it had been traced originally by the horny naked feet of Saxon serfs, and was as hard as stone, worn deep into the turf by the heels of countless generations. Everybody in the neighborhood used it because everybody always had.

A friend of Maude's, a country gentleman, lived midway between the towns and led a reasonably quiet, not to say dull, existence. One day he heard that a vicious bull was straying about the countryside, chasing innocent pedestrians and frightening himself.

Seeking for some variety from the monotony, Maude's friend went forth in the afternoon hoping to glimpse the bull. Once he heard him below, but he did not see him. For four afternoons he tried to discover the whereabouts of the manure, but with no luck.

On the fifth evening he lingered afield until nearly dusk. He had reached a stile where a hedge crossed the footpath when he heard in the distance through the thickening gloom the patter of flying feet, mingled with the thud of heavy hoofs, a convulsive panting and the snorts of some large animal.

Into sight came the local postman, an elderly person, legging along at top speed, his mail pouch bouncing on his hip, his whiskers neatly parted by the wind and blowing backward over his shoulders, and just behind him came the bull, lunging with his horns at the seat of the fugitive's trousers.

By half a length the fleeing man reached the hedge ahead of his pursuer. He flung himself headlong over the stile and in his safe protection lay breathless, while the bull, bellowing his disappointment, turned and strolled off to seek an easier victim.

The spectator aided the quivering postman to his feet.

"He almost had me tonight, Fletcher," said the gentleman sympathetically.

Fletcher wiped his forehead and gasped:

"'E's almost 'ad me every night this week!"—Saturday Evening Post.

BISHOP BRENT IS ELECTED

New Jersey Diocese Choose
Philippine Prelate.

HE IS NOW IN MANILA

Episcopal Church In Annual Convention In Trenton Elect Successor to Late Bishop Scarborough.

Trenton, N. J., May 7.—Right Rev. Charles H. Brent, American bishop of the Protestant Episcopal church in the Philippines since 1901, was unanimously elected bishop of the Episcopal diocese of New Jersey at the annual convention of the clergy and laity of the jurisdiction.

A cable message has been sent to the bishop at Manila asking him if he will accept the election.

Bishop Brent, who will succeed Bishop Scarborough, who died recently, led in the balloting from the beginning. The first ballot, taken on Wednesday, and the second in all, developed no successful candidate. Out of 96 clerical votes Bishop Brent received 37; Bishop Sheldon Griswold, Salina, Kan., 19; Rev. R. B. Shepperd, Trenton, 17; Rev. Alexander Mann, Boston, 4, and Bishop Ballinger, 3.

Out of 71 lay votes Bishop Brent received 32; Bishop Griswold, 13; Rev. R. B. Shepperd, 6; Rev. Alexander Mann, 5; Dr. Fiske, 3.

The second ballot Wednesday, which was the third taken, showed that Bishop Brent received a majority of the lay votes, but failed to receive a majority of the clerical votes at the same time. The vote stood: Clerical votes—Brent, 37; Griswold, 13; Shepperd, 12; Mann, 3; Ballinger, 3. Necessary to choice, 62. Lay votes—Brent, 32; Griswold, 8; Shepperd, 6; Perkins, 2; Birch, 2. Necessary to a choice, 37.

Among the twenty-two clergymen named on the first ballot there were three Philadelphians. They were Rev. Dr. Floyd W. Tomkins, Rev. L. W. Caley and Bishop Suffragan Thomas J. Garland.

Right Rev. Charles Henry Brent was born in Newcastle, Ontario, Can., in April, 1862. He is the son of Canon Henry Brent.

Bishop Brent received his early education in the public and high schools of Newcastle, Ontario, and in the University Trinity college, at Toronto. He was undermaster at Trinity College school from 1885 to 1887; ordained deacon in 1886; priest in 1887; curate of St. Paul's Cathedral, Buffalo, N. Y., 1887; St. John the Evangelist's, Boston, 1888-1891; assistant minister St. Stephen's, Boston, 1891 to 1901, and consecrated bishop in 1901.

Bishop Brent is the author of numerous religious works.

On his last visit to the United States he took the eastward route over the Trans-Siberian railway, and upon reaching Liverpool took passage to New York in the steamer, saying that was the place to meet real people.

FRANK MUST HANG

Court Denies Stay of Girl a New Trial.

Atlanta, Ga., May 7.—Judge Hill overruled the motion for a new trial for Leo M. Frank, convicted of the murder of Mary Phagan, a factory girl.

This decision comes in the face of a statement from Detective William J. Burns, to the effect that Frank was not guilty of the crime, but that the girl was murdered by a colored man employed at the factory as a sweeper.

Burns made an extensive investigation of the case following the conviction of Frank and announced that he was convinced that the deed had been done by an abnormal man.

He said that in his opinion Frank was not that sort of man and announced that the colored sweeper, who was the chief witness against Frank in the trial, was the murderer.

Militia Ammunition Ordered.

Washington, May 7.—Ammunition to supply the field artillery of the organized militia were ordered manufactured at the Frankford arsenal in Philadelphia by General Crozier, chief of ordnance. The order was for 170,000 rounds of ammunition for three-inch field guns. This amount will give the sixty-three batteries of field artillery in the militia about one-half of their full equipment of shells.

U. S. Fleet Salutes King George.

Vera Cruz, May 7.—The American fleet off Vera Cruz dressed ship and fired a salute of twenty guns in honor of the fourth anniversary of the accession to the British throne of King George. The Spanish and French war vessels also fired salutes, and the various admirals in the port called upon Rear Admiral Sir Christopher Craze, the British commander.

Banker's Wife a Suicide.

Greenwich, Conn., May 7.—Mrs. John T. Perkins, wife of the vice president of the Corn Exchange bank, of New York, shot and killed herself in bed at her home. Her nurse, Miss Stella German, had left her alone for a few minutes. Mrs. Perkins had been mentally unbalanced. It is believed, by trouble with her eyes.

WILSON-M'ADOO WEDDING TODAY

Will be Married in the White House This Evening.

Washington, May 7.—The wedding of Miss Eleanor Wilson, third daughter of the president, and Secretary of the Treasury William G. McAdoo will take place this evening at 6 o'clock in the blue room in the White House.

The ceremony will be performed by Rev. Sylvanus Beach, pastor of the Princeton, N. J., Presbyterian church and will be witnessed by less than sixty persons. The Marine band will furnish the music, and immediately after the ceremony a supper of fifty covers will be served in the state dining room.

The wedding presents for the bride are pouring in in an uninterrupted stream. The senators have raised nearly $1000 with which to purchase a gift. It will be a piece of jewelry. Postmaster General and Mrs. Burleson have sent Miss Eleanor a lavalier, consisting of an exquisite opal—Miss Eleanor was born in October—which is surrounded with pearls and depends from a gold chain, with handsome round pearls, set at a distance of an inch apart.

Although the White House maintains an almost impenetrable silence with regard to the going away of the bridegroom, it is generally understood that a suite has been engaged upon one of the transatlantic liners leaving New York on Saturday. A trip abroad of greater duration than four weeks will be the wedding tour.

14 MORE OF CREW SAVED

Nineteen Men From Burning Steamship Are Still Missing.

New York, May 7.—Fourteen more survivors of the steamship Columbian, which burned at sea late on Sunday night, were picked up by the Phoenix liner Manhattan. Captain McDonald, of the Columbian, was one of those saved.

News of the rescue reached New York in the form of the following message sent by Captain Lazell, of the Manhattan, to Sanderson & Son, New York agents of the line:

"Sable Island, Wednesday, 5.45 a. m.—Picked up one boat of Columbian, captain and thirteen others; one engineer killed in explosion, one man drowned leaving ship. Still searching for other boat."

This leaves only the nineteen men still adrift in the other boat to be accounted for, according to the agents. The Cunard liner Franconia having picked up thirteen men and the body of Chief Steward Matthews in a boat Tuesday. There were only forty-nine men on the Columbian.

Statements That May Be Investigated.
Testimony of Gettysburg Citizens.

When a Gettysburg citizen comes to the front, telling his friends and neighbors of his experience, you can rely on his sincerity. The statements of people residing in far away places do not command your confidence. Home endorsement is the kind that backs Doan's Kidney Pills. Such testimony is convincing. Investigation proves it true. Below is a statement of a Gettysburg resident. No stronger proof of merit can be had.

Mrs. J. Menchey, 46 Breckenridge street, Gettysburg, Pa., says: "Since I used and publicly endorsed Doan's Kidney Pills some years ago I have had no further need of a kidney medicine. I never enjoyed very good health and when kidney complaint came on, it caused me much distress. I had pains in my back and frequently had dizzy spells and chills. When a friend told me to try Doan's Kidney Pills, I got a box at the People's Drug Store. This remedy acted promptly and before long, I was in good health."

ASINGULAR LETTER

By JOHN Y. LARNED

We don't know how many cases have occurred where minors have been swindled out of their inheritances by relatives, guardians or executors, but there are quite a number of such instances on record. When we remember what a temptation a fortune is and the number of unscrupulous persons in the world it is a wonder that there are not more such cases.

When I was in the high school I formed an attachment for a girl named Hazel Mansfield. She belonged to a wealthy family, while my parents were poor. Indeed, when I went to college I was obliged to work my way by teaching and other expedients. I parted with Hazel Mansfield when we were graduated at the high school and did not meet her again for many years.

After leaving college I studied law and in time put out my shingle as an attorney. I had not practiced long before I received by mail a copy of a book handsomely bound and altogether quite an acceptable gift. After tearing off the cover, which was much soiled, I looked eagerly on the flyleaf for the name of the donor and was surprised to find the leaf as blank as the day it came out of the manufacturer's hands. I ran through the pages, expecting that a card would appear, but found none. Then I opened the book and shook it. There was nothing in it.

I examined the writing on the cover, which was in a woman's hand, but it was not familiar to me; at least I did not remember it. I was addressed as an individual, not as a lawyer. I looked all over the wrapper, but saw nothing to give me any clue. The book, considering the way it came to me, was a mystery.

A few days later I concluded to read the book, hoping that there might be something in the text that would suggest an explanation. It was a book of travels and to me very dull. I was about to give up its perusal when I came to a light lead pencil mark under the word "my." I noted the fact and read on. On the next page the word "dear" was similarly underscored. This began to look as though I was on the track of something. I now ceased to read, but looked for another marked word. It was "old." The next was "school." I was somewhat disappointed, for "my dear old school" meant nothing to me. But I turned the leaves till I came to the word "mate."

These five words were a revelation. My mind at once turned back to my school days, but I had a number of friends among them and could not settle on any one who would be likely to send me any such mysterious communication. I read on and evolved the following sentence: "I need both a friend and a lawyer." At this point I was so eager to learn who was my correspondent that I turned to the back of the book and examined it from the end to the beginning. Here I found letters, not words, underscored. The first letter marked was a "d," the next an "l," the next an "e," the next an "i," the next an "f." I knew I was noting the letters backward and kept trying by reading them in reverse order. When I came to the "f" I noticed that thus far they spelled "field." Four letters more, read also in reverse, gave me "mans." The two syllables together gave "Mansfield."

Could the communication come from my old chum Hazel Mansfield? I looked eagerly for the next letter, and, sure enough, it was an "l." I ran over the pages rapidly, coming to "e," "z," "a," "h" in sequence.

Having discovered my correspondent, I was now impatient to know why she had need of a friend and a lawyer. Turning to the forward part of the book where I had left off, I began again reading the message. It informed me that the writer was held a prisoner in a country house with no other near neighbors by the executor of her father's estate. She was kept there waiting legal permission to place her in a retreat for feeble minded persons or to be disposed of in some other way that would enable the executor to appropriate her estate. A part of this she knew and a part she surmised. She begged me to do something to extricate her from her terrible position.

Her reason for sending me the book was that she was not permitted to communicate with any one. She had found the book in the library and at times when she was not watched had underscored the words and letters that composed the message. She was permitted to go out riding guarded by a woman who was her jailer. She had concealed the book, which she had wrapped addressed and stamped, in her muff and while being driven out, when the woman was looking the other way, to drop it out of the carriage.

All being explained, I went to work on the case at once, applying to the court for a habeas corpus, and before anything could be done by the enemy I got Miss Mansfield out of her jailer's possession. I unearthed so much reality that before long I had the executor of the estate fleeing to some foreign land, where he went into hiding to keep out of jail. He had squandered one-half the estate that he had been appointed to manage, but I saved the other half for his legitimate owner.

As the husband of the heiress I managed the property so successfully that it is now what it was when her father died.

But a Spur.

Ambition has its disappointments to sour us but never the good fortune to satisfy us.—Benjamin Franklin.

Be Pretty! Turn

Gray Hair Dark

Try Grandmother's old Favor

ite Recipe of Sage Tea

and Sulphur

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy.
